Senator Cannon has gone to Idaho on a mission of friendship. Between Utah's senior representative in the upper branch of the national congress and Fred T. Dubois, senator from Idaho, there exists a bond of friendship like unto the historical tie that bound Damon to Pythias and Pythias to Damon.

Their ambitions run in the same direction, and they both are adverse to having "ex" written before their honorable titles. That in a few short months the objectionable little word will be attached to the title now borne by Dubois is a proposition that seems to admit of little doubt.

exercises yesterday consisted of caring the anniversay sermon by Presihearing the anniversal sermon by President George Q. Cannon at the assembly half. Today the students will have appropriate exercises at the college building and the affair will terminate in a grand reception and ball tonight.

Last evening's services opened with the singing of "Captain of Israe's Hoste" by the choir, after which Dr. Carl Maeser offered prayer. This was followed by a selection in German by the German students. Their singing was excellent. Norman McCarrity, a rising mustcal genius, presided at the organ and favored the assembly with a selection which in many respects was the feature of the evening.

PRESIDENT CANNON

PRESIDENT CANNON.

President Cannon said by way of opening that the carse of education was an interesting one. This was testiled to by the presence of such a multitude. This was proper, particularly as the Latter day Saints college was and should be of special benefit to the members of the courch. The speaker dealt briefly with the early history of the college and its marvelous growth. The people of the church, he thought, ought to appreciate the lasting benefits of such an institution. flucation. The result has been that the achers and general surrounding have rected such an influence that they have ecome very friendly to the church or in probability joined it. Now without institutions of learning here at home where nowledge could be disseminated by achers baptised in the spirit the Latter-ay Saints would be compelled to send tell boys away and the result might be a has often been the case—the boy rim an infidel. A second reason why are Mormons should have a college of leif own was on account of the peculiar ceition of people. They were placed in te world as beacon lights and preservers of the truth.

One reason why it was unwise to send boys and grits to eastern colleges was on account of the text books used. The general trend of teaching in the non-sectarian chools was toward skepticism and unbelief. Something should be done to counteract this. The speaker recalled one oreasion when chancelor of the University of Deserot. It had been rumored that the teachers were inspiring unbelief in the students and so an investigation followed. The result was many text books were found of a character to inspire infidelity. This was the great trouble with the text books of today. Man needs spiritual development and the education afforded inday was not well adapted to work out man's spiritual possibilities.

The Mormon church should have a college. Not that the polishing of a man made him any better and infiniter, but rather for social reasons. He well recalled that the Mormon church use founded as a time of illuseracy. In soite TENDING TO SKEPTICISM.

college. Not that the polishing of a man made him any better and intinter. but rather for social reasons. He well recalled that the Mormon church was founded at a time of likeracy. In soite of this and the general lack of education of many of the early leaders of the church there was something which made them superior. They were challenged to joint dehates and invariably came of the victors until people have found that a Gentile is no match for a Mormon. The speaker explained he was in favor of sectaries instruction. He was in favor of sectaries instruction. He was in favor of sectaries instruction. He was in favor of having the children sent to the common schools for two reasons. First, because they pay taxes for their support, and, second, because the church desired to show the public press it was not opposed to the district school.

Concheding President Cannon said he was ashamed of this community for not supporting the college any better now than in the past. The institution had 25 pupils when it should have ten times that many. A great deal of interest was interesting to know that some of the hormons could trace their ancestry back for 360 years. A great many Mormons were of royal blood and the speaker predicted that before long the Mormon clere would be admitted to any cours of royal blood and the speaker predicted that before long the Mormon clere would be natmitted to any cours of royal blood and the speaker predicted that before long the Mormon clere would be not because they are sainable adjunct to secial elevation although not absolutely essential.

AGAINST FOOTBALL

AGAINST FOOTBALL

After the choir had sang "Hark; Hark! My Soul." President Cannon again came forward and warned the people against taking part in or encouraging football. Such an amusement was a trait of barbarism and he hoped none of the Latter-day Saints would allow themselves or their children to take part in such an "unseemly" came.

city come in for a small share of prominence.

The book is a poem of pictures of the best skill of the artist. It is proted in colors and the effects sought are startling and pleasing in the extreme. From a lishing scene on the pine bordered banks of the Eagle river, which opens the book, one is led through the canyons and over the peaks and across the prairies through the entire state. Here one sees the representation of the old emigrant trans wenting their way across the trackless desert, while a turn of the leaf shows the superbrains rushing through the majestic Royal Gorge. The photogravures of the thriving towns of Colorado are splendid. From the overhanging rocks, one looks down upon the trite little town of Lynn, while the eye is pleased with the sight of fair Grand Junction with the rushing waters of the river as it whirls past the famous iron bridges which span it at that point. On one page we find a sheep ranch with the fleecy animals placifly feeding, while the next gives us a stirring scene on a cattle ranch at "round-up" time. One passes from fertile fields to fruitful orchards and from smilling groves to silver lakes.

Everything which Colorado has is vividly and accurately portrayed. Mining,
